

2014 Citizen of the Year

Nominee: Brad & Shari Jackman

Nominator: Carol Shimizu

In the Nominator's words:

Brad and Shari Jackman have been incredibly generous with their time and talent in all aspects of athletics at Dublin High School during the past six years.

As officers and members of the Dublin High School Athletic Booster organization, they have tirelessly supported our school's athletic programs. Their fundraising activities enable our school to offer athletic competition at the freshmen, junior varsity and varsity level for boys and girls in football, tennis, cross-country, volleyball, golf, basketball, soccer, wrestling, baseball, softball, track and field, lacrosse and swimming. Year-long fundraising efforts, including the operation of our concession stand for school and league events, have provided the financial support for transportation to competitions, the services of an on-site athletic trainer and financial support for student athletes in need. In addition, college scholarships have been awarded to our graduating seniors.

The countless hours Brad and Shari Jackman have contributed toward the excellence in Dublin High School athletics enable students to have experiences that would not otherwise be available. Through participation in various sports, students learn the value of team work and the rewards of hard work. Student athletes are held to a high level of expectation for their behavior, their character development and their academic success. Through the work of Brad and Shari Jackman, athletic programs have flourished and students have been able to participate in programs that help them grow physically, emotionally and socially. Dublin High School and the city of Dublin are fortunate to have Brad and Shari Jackman working hard in support of all children.
